NEW INTERPRETATIONS OF OLD FAVORITES

IN the procession of styles each season, new interpretations of old favorites are made, and of such come and success, that these old-fashioned things can be.

The ready blouse is an institution, like other fashions, and it is among these old favorites that are newly interpreted each season. Just now it has, shortly, setting in company with skirts to which it appears in the model suit as shown in the illustration. It is a spirited and youthful affair, to be developed in any of the sturdier settings, which will appeal to busy and up-to-date young women, whatever their occupation. In the picture it is shown made of serge in a short shepherd check, exquisitely tailored, and is as crisp and snappy as a military uniform—never was anything better suited to the American girl. In every particular this midly suit deserves to be accepted as a criterion to measure others by.

All we ask of our old favorites is that there shall be something new about them, some little cleverness or originality in their composition or their decoration, so in the materials used, or in the ways of using those we have long known. And now the new fall blouses are showing just how well they can more than fill our expectations. They are made of georgette, crepe de chine, velvet, cheviot, and in these patterns are the perennial favorites that we have always with us. They are endlessly varied, by combinations of materials and colors, by new treatments, and by fine original touches in the management of collars, belts, hems, and trimmings.

Among fall-colored blouses, crepe de chine appears to be a favored fabric. Some of the new models are high-necked. Narrow tulle of the material makes an effective finish for them, but there are many other ways of trimming them. The tulle-trimmed blouse with the belted waist line and buttons. It is handsome in dark velvet lined with contrasting silk that shows through cut-out slashes bound with the same silk. Velvet overblouses with short puffed cut without sleeves and worn over georgette undresses are handsome and dainty. They are usually decorated with silk embroidery. Georgette and velvet are chosen for the most elaborate models, which are also done in broad tulle to plainer but not less distinguished styles.

Back from former enemy powers follow suit, either in rapid succession, and further facilities are afforded progress toward accomplishing the carrying traffic, now that the plans made by Kropp and Ehrhardt which formerly manufactured was now being turned out peace goods in great quantities for overseas consumption.

Shipping authorities are urging the revival of numerous pre-war plans for harbor excavations, on the ground that with the rapidly increasing export trade, the port will in two years be far too small and freight business will be lost to Scandinavian ports.

D'ARCY OPPOSES ARENTZ MINING CODE MEASURE

In replying to a letter from Congressman Samuel S. Arentz, wherein the writer states that the new mining bill pending before congress is open for consideration and that he only introduced the measure with a view to having it criticized by mining men in general, A. J. D'Arcy, well-known mining man of Goldfield, has addressed a letter to Mr. Arentz, wherein he disapproves of the measure. Mr. Arentz has always contended that he is against the bill, and only introduced it so that the mining industry might express itself regarding the matter. The letter of Mr. D'Arcy follows:

"I consider that any material change in the mining laws would lead to endless trouble and litigation. The resolution of congress setting aside the requirement of performing $100 worth of improvements on mining claims for the years 1917, 1918 and 1919 caused very little disturbance outside of the failure of a few cases where the owners of mining claims failed to file an affidavit of their 'intention to hold'."

"The resolution of congress extending the time for the annual work of 1920 to July 1, 1921, is apparently going to lead to a considerable amount of litigation. Disputes have already arisen as to whether mining claims were open to location at midnight on June 30, 1921, or whether they were open for location at midnight on July 1, 1921. Also, this same resolution has brought up the point as to whether the work had to be finished by July 1, 1921, or whether the work could have been started on June 30, 1921, and prosecuted diligently and continuously until the work was finished."

"In my own knowledge I am aware of a number of cases where these points will have to be threshed out in the courts."

"The mining laws have been established long enough, so that the requirements for locating, holding and perfecting mining claims are well understood by those engaged in the business and taken as a whole have worked out very satisfactorily."

"However, there seems to be one very 'loophole' in the present laws, and that is the so-called 'apex law,' which gives the discoverer of a lode or vein the right to follow his lode or vein outside of vertical planes through the surface boundary lines of his claim. The intent of congress was to give to the discoverer of a lode or vein the full benefit of his discovery and permit him to follow and mine his vein regardless of whether it extended outside his surface boundary or not. A good and wise provision, but, oh, how it is suffered at the hands of our expert geologists and legal talent, it has been bent, twisted and broken. Veins were shown to be where they were not, and lodes in places where they had never been seen before; prospectors who had thought they had made a discovery found it was but a prospector's dream."

"I would suggest that the so-called 'apex law' be repealed and that the mining operations of the owner of a mining claim be confined to vertical planes extending through the surface boundary lines of his claim."
